George Mason University offers both a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in physical education.

The undergraduate program is research based and stresses teaching standards established by the National Association for Sport and Physical Education. Students earn a BSEd, which fulfills the Virginia academic licensure requirements to teach health AND physical education at both the elementary AND secondary levels. This dual licensure preparation gives Mason students a significant career advantage!

The master's degree program is for practicing health and physical education teachers. The advanced course work is offered through the university's Graduate School of Education. Students earn a MEd in Curriculum and Instruction with a concentration in Physical Education. (Note: The master's degree does not fulfill licensure requirements.)

The Health and Physical Education program is part of the School of Recreation, Health, and Tourism within Mason's College of Education and Human Development. CEHD is accredited by Virginia's Department of Education and the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE).
